

Star Valley plans to fix Moonlight, Pinon

BY PETE ALESHIR
ROUNDUP STAFF REPORTER

Star Valley will spend $240,000 in federal grant funds to make flood and safety improvements on a portion of Moonlight Drive and in upgrading Pinon Drive.

The council on Tuesday shuffled its priorities for spending of the federal money and dropped flood control improvements on Quail Hollow Drive to the bottom of its priority list.

The Community Block Grant Development funds are intended to help cities and towns help low-income residents. Payson generally spends its block grant money on things like rehabilitation of low-income housing and reducing neighborhood blight.

However, Town Manager Tim Grier assured the council during its meeting that the town remains free to use the money on things like street improvements, since most of Star Valley qualifies as a lower-income area under the federal guidelines.

The council made a roughly $100,000 project to improve a 4,000-foot-long stretch of Pinon Drive in the Diamond Point area its top priority. The money would pay for paving, widening, and improvements to remove the deep ditches on both sides of the curbside road.

The council made the $125,000 project to pave, widen and improve about half of Moonlight Drive its second highest priority.

Grier said that with the completion of those two projects, Star Valley will have paved 60 percent of the dirt roads it inherited from Gila County when the town incorporated six years ago.

Several council members wondered aloud whether it was a good idea to spend the federal low-income grant money on street repairs. Normally, the town uses gas tax Highway User Revenue Fund (HURF) money passed along by the state to fund road improvements.

However, the state reduced HURF payments to cities and towns by about 18 percent this year and is devoting a growing percentage of the gas tax money to providing money for the state Department of Public Safety.

Grier said "HURF is declining and it looks like a continuing trend — the robbing of HURF money for cities and towns. (The Legislature) used to apologize as they plucked your pocket, but now they no longer do."

The council wrestled with settling the priorities, since Quail Hollow also suffers from erosion and flooding problems in heavy rains.

'We could be rather surprised ... You could get halfway up the road and say 'oops' gotta make this eight-foot jog'

Vern Leis

However, Grier and the town engineer insisted that narrow, heavily-trafficked Pinon should remain the top priority.

"This is the most important road in terms of the danger factor and erosion," said Joe Janusz, town building official.

Councilor Vern Leis asked whether the $100,000 cost estimate included research on easements and property issues along the road. The engineering consultant said "that's opening a can of worms" and that the bid made the assumption that the road easement included the whole stretch between the fences on each side of the existing roadway.

But Leis objected to that assumption. "You can't go from an eight-foot-wide road to 16 feet and have all the fences be equidistant. We could be rather surprised when we start doing construction. You could get halfway up the road and say 'oops' gotta make this eight-foot jog."

The council ultimately approved the priority list, but said the town should spend the several thousand dollars necessary to do a title search along the right-of-way.

"That's probably money well spent," said Councilor George Binney of the right-of-way title search.

The council also debated whether to remove Quail Hollow from the priority list and replace it with one final flood-prone crossing on Moonlight Drive.

However, Grier said the town hadn't done the necessary studies needed to get that Moonlight Drive crossing added to the approved list of projects prior to the federal deadline for committing the funds.

Besides, he said, the town needed a back-up project on the approved priority list like Quail Hollow in case the bids came in low or something prevented the town from going forward with one of the higher priority projects.

"You can't add a new project at this point and there's no strategic advantage to leaving Quail Hollow off," said Grier.

In the end, the council approved the priority list unanimously.

Redistricting maps go to supervisors

Aug. 23 work study session planned to discuss options

BY MICHELE NELSON
ROUNDUP STAFF REPORTER

Gila County's Redistricting Advisory Committee officially accomplished its mission when it handed over maps of voting districts to the board of supervisors at its meeting on Aug. 17.

Now the job of navigating the field and submitting redistricting maps to the Department of Justice for the Gila County Board of Supervisors and Gila County College lies with the supervisors and the public.

"Our goal was to submit at least two maps of each district, but we ended up with three," said Robert Sanchez, chairman of the advisory committee.

"Copies of these maps have gone to the tribal councils, towns, and political parties. We want maps together by the presidential election in January of 2012," said Linda Eastlick, director of Gila County elections.

Despite a diverse mix of members both racially, politically and from different geographical areas in the county, the committee found the experience anticlimactic, said member David Prechtel.

Yet the job wasn't easy. Out of 21 maps submitted for the supervisor districts, 20 did not meet the requirements of the Voting Rights Act. The maps for the community college district fell closely within guidelines, said Sanchez.

The committee worked hard with consultants analyzing submitted maps to find acceptable deviations of population and minority voting block numbers to pass DOJ requirements. The committee held 11 meetings from March 22 until July 29, traveling from San Carlos to Pine and Strawberry, reported Sanchez.

At the end of the committee's presentation, the board of supervisors thanked members and voted to dissolve the committee.

The next redistricting map meeting will be held at the board of supervisors work session in Globe on Tuesday, Aug. 23 at 10 a.m.

For members of the public from northern Gila County, the meeting may be attended at the offices of Supervisor Tommie Martin, 600 E. Highway 260.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT CITIZEN INPUT TO THE REDISTRICTING PROCESS

General Information

- Redistricting occurs after every decennial census and citizens are encouraged to participate in the redistricting process by attending meetings, voicing their concerns and/or ideas, and submitting maps, comments and/or ideas.
- Why do we redistrict? The US Constitution, under the principle of "one person, one vote" requires districts from which we elect representatives be substantially equal in total census population. Because the population changes with each census, jurisdictions must review new population statistics and determine the extent to which population must be adjusted to meet the principle of "one person, one vote".
- The difference in "substantially equal" census population between districts should be less than 5% range. Previously the Department of Justice allowed variances up to 10%, however, recent court cases have reinforced lower percentages. Therefore, Gila County will be looking toward lower percentage variances.
- The official Census count of Gila County in 2010 was 53,597 persons
- Ideal district sizes and an example of variance allowances are:

District	Ideal Size	5% Variance	3% Variance	1% Variance
Supervisorial	17,866 people	893 people	535 people	179 people
Comm College	10,719 people	536 people	322 people	107 people
- To comply with the Federal Voting Rights Act, new districts cannot dilute the voting strength of racial or language minority populations as they exist in the present districts.
- Federal law prohibits Gila County from discriminating against minority citizens by weakening or eliminating their ability to elect their chosen candidates for office.
- Federal law requires that the U.S. Department of Justice approve all redistricting plans in Arizona, and in many other states, before the plans can be used and elections can take place. If the Department of Justice decides that Gila County's redistricting plan is discriminatory, they will not allow Gila County to use the discriminatory redistricting plan.
- Sometimes a majority of minorities live in a given district. This is called "minority majority". A statistical analysis using 2010 minority population Census numbers and past minority voting history will be performed on any plan submitted to ensure compliance with Voting Rights Act requirements.
- Examples of minority population issues to be considered include: Native American or Latino populations should not be split into multiple parts or crammed all into one area as that may dilute their voting strength.
- 2010 voting-age minority populations for Supervisorial Districts are:

District 1	9.13%
District 2	30.16%
District 3	50.28%

 (This district's minority population should not be reduced, pursuant to federal law)
 District 3 50.28% (This is a "minority-majority" district and minority voting strength cannot be diluted, according to federal law)
- 2010 voting-age minority populations for College Districts are:

District 1	8.97%
District 2	10.91%
District 3	23.12%
District 4	35.12%

 (This district's minority population should not be reduced, pursuant to federal law)
 District 5 76.31% (This is a "minority-majority" district and minority voting strength cannot be diluted, according to federal law)
- The statements "should not be reduced", and "cannot be diluted" do not mean that district populations cannot be moved or changed. What they mean is that in order to maintain minority voting strength, if a proposed map SEE REDISTRICTING PAGE B-5
